Sita makes angry response to Imran's denial

By Khalid Hasan

WASHINGTON: Sita White, Imran Khan's former English girlfriend, has reacted angrily to a statement issued by a spokesman of the Pakistan Tehrik-e-Insaaf on Wednesday describing her demand that the former cricket star pay for the education of his daughter Tyrian as part of the (Pakistani) "establishment's sleaze campaign."

In a rejoinder issued from Los Angeles, Ms White (42) said, "I was hoping that Imran's spokesperson would not have to challenge me again. I was hoping not to have had to say that besides Imran trying to enjoy political power rather than support his beautiful daughter Tyrian, and give her the faith she needs so much after he met up with Tyrian a summer and a half ago, he continues to hurl accusations of not being the father. But what about the promises he made to Tyrian in the garden of Jemima's house, while he stoked her hair? Has he forgotten? Well, Tyrian has not."

Ms White said, "Has Imran forgotten to mention that even if I were a multi-millionaire, it is his responsibility in fathering a child that we both wanted and planned. This 23rd of August, my father will have been dead for seven years and my sister and I have yet to inherit what was ours. We are in a legal battle against people that I rather not mention who want to rob us of our full inheritance; so it is because of this that I seek some assistance from Imran, but obviously he knows some of my family members and lawyers and maybe wants to see if I will announce who they are."

But Imran has forgotten that he made me a tigress, and if I have endured seven hard years of raising our daughter and although my mansion might be falling apart, I will continue to fight for justice for all those single women who chose to raise their children in the middle of all the chaos, of men not wanting to help their offspring.
